WE have copied a number of articles from our country cotemporaries throughout Mipdle Tennesse, advocating Judge Nicholson's claims to the Supreme Bench. The indications are that there will scarcely be any opposition to him at all, so universally and profoundly are the people everywhere apressed with his peculiar fitness for the position.

The enforcement of the provisions of the coercion bill has already commenced in Ireland. A large part of that distressed country is proclaimed altogether under martial law. We have had a pretty steady and heavy receipt of Irish emigrants always, but we may now expect to see them landed here by tens of thousands, instead of thousands.
